VISION

TNI envisions a world of peace, equity and democracy on a sustainable planet brought about and sustained by an informed and engaged people.

MESSAGE FROM THE DIRECTOR

Dubbed the 'year of protest', 2019 saw millions of people take to the streets on every continent.

There was plenty to protest. Deepening inequality, rising cost of living, autocratic governments, discrimination, and the concentration of wealth and power into fewer and fewer hands. Many protests were met with brutal repression, but this did not quell the fight for dignity and freedom.

TNI stood alongside and in support of these movements, as we have consistently done for all 46 years of our existence. We have provided research and logistical support and put forward proposals that can bring about social and ecological transformation.

One front of that struggle is at a global level, challenging the architecture that locks in the policies and practices against which people are revolting. 2019 saw some tangible progress as negotiations finally got underway for the Treaty on Transnational Corporations and Other Business Entities at the UN's Human Rights Council. If successful, this would for the first time corporations would be held legally accountable at international level for human rights abuses. Meanwhile, the Investor-State Dispute Settlement system, a key mechanism corporations use to avoid regulation, also faced increasing challenges to its legitimacy. In part as a result of public pressure, delegates from 100 countries began meeting to discuss reforms, although more mobilization will be needed to ensure they are not just cosmetic. These campaigns go to the core of the global power of corporations, and are driven by a powerful and intersectional movement demanding these shadow sovereigns, as TNI's President Susan George characterized them, be dethroned. TNI has been at the heart of this movement from its inception.

TNI is also engaged in many struggles that are part of everyday life. This includes supporting movements for universal public services. Our detailed mapping and research of innovative public alternatives – that thrive despite immense pressure to privatize - has shown that universal public service provision is not only feasible and viable but imperative for the healthy functioning of societies and economies.

And further, especially given the COVID-19 context, there is a groundswell of popular support to win back public services. In a heartwarming letter of thanks following the international The Future is Public conference co-hosted by TNI in Amsterdam in December, one delegate expressed gratitude for TNI's work in providing an, "international space that allows movements and organizations of different kinds to think together ... to create a transversal network... (which requires) an environment of trust and care... and that is what we all could feel in the atmosphere of all the meetings and workshops". TNI may be best known by many for its knowledge production but within social movements, it is also this caring, facilitative capacity to nurture transversal networks for which we are appreciated.

In June, we took the opportunity to assess the political climate at an international strategy seminar amidst an unfolding second wave of uprisings in North Africa, extended protests in Chile, the sustained climate strikes, and many more revolts around the world. We examined the shifting state of global power – in particular, the globalization of Chinese corporations through investments in mega-infrastructure around the world; the rise of data-driven capitalism; challenges to multilateralism; and ensuing geopolitical contestations. TNI subsequently co-produced a framework document for movements in Asia and Europe grappling with questions concerning China's Belt and Road Initiative, and is making a concerted effort to involve activist-scholars from and/or working on China. We established a new partnership with IT for Change, an India-based research and advocacy institute working on data rights, digital divides and digital governance, and employed a coordinator for our growing work in North Africa. The strategic discussions also provided initial input for the development of a new five-year strategic plan for TNI.

Our Fellows and Associates did us proud as always as you can read later in this report. They play a pivotal role within particular transnational movements, are public intellectuals that command much respect among TNI constituencies, and play an important ambassadorial role for TNI too. One, Jun Borrás, earned much deserved recognition in being awarded a prestigious grant for top scientists from the European Research Council.

On a more sombre note, Thura Myint Lwin, a much loved and valued member of our Myanmar team, passed away after a long illness. We posthumously published his last paper on methamphetamine use in Myanmar, which resulted in a recent article in The Economist.

On the financial front, we more or less broke even in 2019. Fundraising continued to be a major priority, given the risk that a five-year grant representing half our budget might not be renewed from 2021. We reached out to sympathetic private foundations, with some success, and made a concerted effort to build an independent donor base, doubling our income from that source compared to the previous year. We have also built a continuity reserve that will buy TNI a little time should we face a major reduction in funding. Fortunately, we heard in March 2020 that one of our alliances would receive another five-year grant which provides some welcome longer-term security. More work does need to be done, however, to ensure we can sustain the breadth of our programme while rising to the challenge of a rapidly changing world now spurred by the unprecedented pandemic currently engulfing us all.

Grateful thanks go to all our funders and donors, Fellows and Associates, staff and research associates, allies and partners and, of course, of Supervisory Board for their ongoing support and contributions to TNI's efforts to put progressive and transformative ideas into movement.

OUR MISSION

TNI's mission is to strengthen international social movements with rigorous research, reliable information, sound analysis and constructive proposals that advance progressive, democratic policy change and common solutions to global problems. In so doing, TNI acts as a unique nexus between social movements, engaged scholars and policy makers.

OVERARCHING GOALS

TNI's overarching goals for 2016-2020, consistent with our emancipatory vision for society, remain:

STRATEGIES

Construct a broadly-shared understanding of what blocks realization of an emancipatory vision of the world and of viable ways towards achieving that vision, especially from the perspective of people in the Global South.

EMPOWERMENT

Achieve the realization of potentials by citizens everywhere, but especially those suffering exclusion and poverty, to organize around, articulate and amplify their concerns and proposals.

TRANSFORMATION

Advocate for the transformation of norms, policies and practice of key public and private institutions, especially those with transnational influence, towards greater transparency, accountability, engagement with and responsiveness to citizens in democratic, equitable and inclusive ways.

In support of these long-term goals, which also indicate the type of work TNI does, an ambitious five-year programme was developed. By the end of 2019, as TNI enters the final year of the programme, impressive cumulative progress towards achievement of outcomes and goals have been documented. Below are brief summaries in this regard for 2019, and some elaboration of indications that the programme is on track to achieve its goals by the end of 2020.

Meanwhile in June 2019, TNI convened an international strategic seminar as a first step towards developing a new five-year strategic plan 2021-2026. The seminar involved 60 people including staff, fellows, board members, some key partner organizations and a number of knowledgeable resource people. Priority issues discussed included environmental breakdown; the emergence of data capitalism; and the rise of China.

HOW WE WORK

For more than 40 Years, TNI has served as an activist think tank with, and for, progressive social movements across the globe. TNI takes as its vantage point the perspective of the Global South, by which we mean the poor, exploited, marginalised and oppressed of the world. Our scope is geographically global and scientifically social with an emphasis on multi-disciplinarity. Our focus primarily concerns global public policy matters.

TNI collaborated with 384 organisations
in 60 countries,
37 regional networks and
20 global networks.

“My experience of working with TNI has been very positive. TNI provides a high level of technical expertise and is always willing to work collaboratively and share the expertise. PSI particularly appreciates the way TNI is able to take complex issues and make them understandable for workers and their union representatives. We also appreciate the way TNI has a worker and development focus that looks at the causes of global problems and not just the effects. Our partnership with TNI is valuable because TNI’s values, its focus on making a real difference and the professionalism of its staff make collaboration easy.”

Daniel Bertossa

Assistant General Secretary of Public Services International (PSI), representing 30 million members in 170 countries

WHO WE WORK WITH

MOVEMENTS

TNI works in support of, and as part of, progressive social movements in developing a relevant and useful research and advocacy agenda. We work with a broad range of organizations including trade unions, organizations of small-scale farmers and fishers, environmental and feminist networks, media platforms, and numerous issue-specific research and advocacy groups – both directly and within intersectional coalitions. We help to make links wherever possible and, in so doing, contribute to building powerful transnationally-connected movements for change.

POLICY-MAKERS

From local to international levels, and across the political spectrum, TNI provides civil servants and elected representatives with information and analysis on a wide-range of themes. We do this, for example, through co-convening informal policy dialogues, presentations to parliamentary committees, or side events at UN meetings. Wherever possible we work with allies and try to ensure that those in whose name the advocacy is done are at the table.

ACTIVIST-SCHOLARS

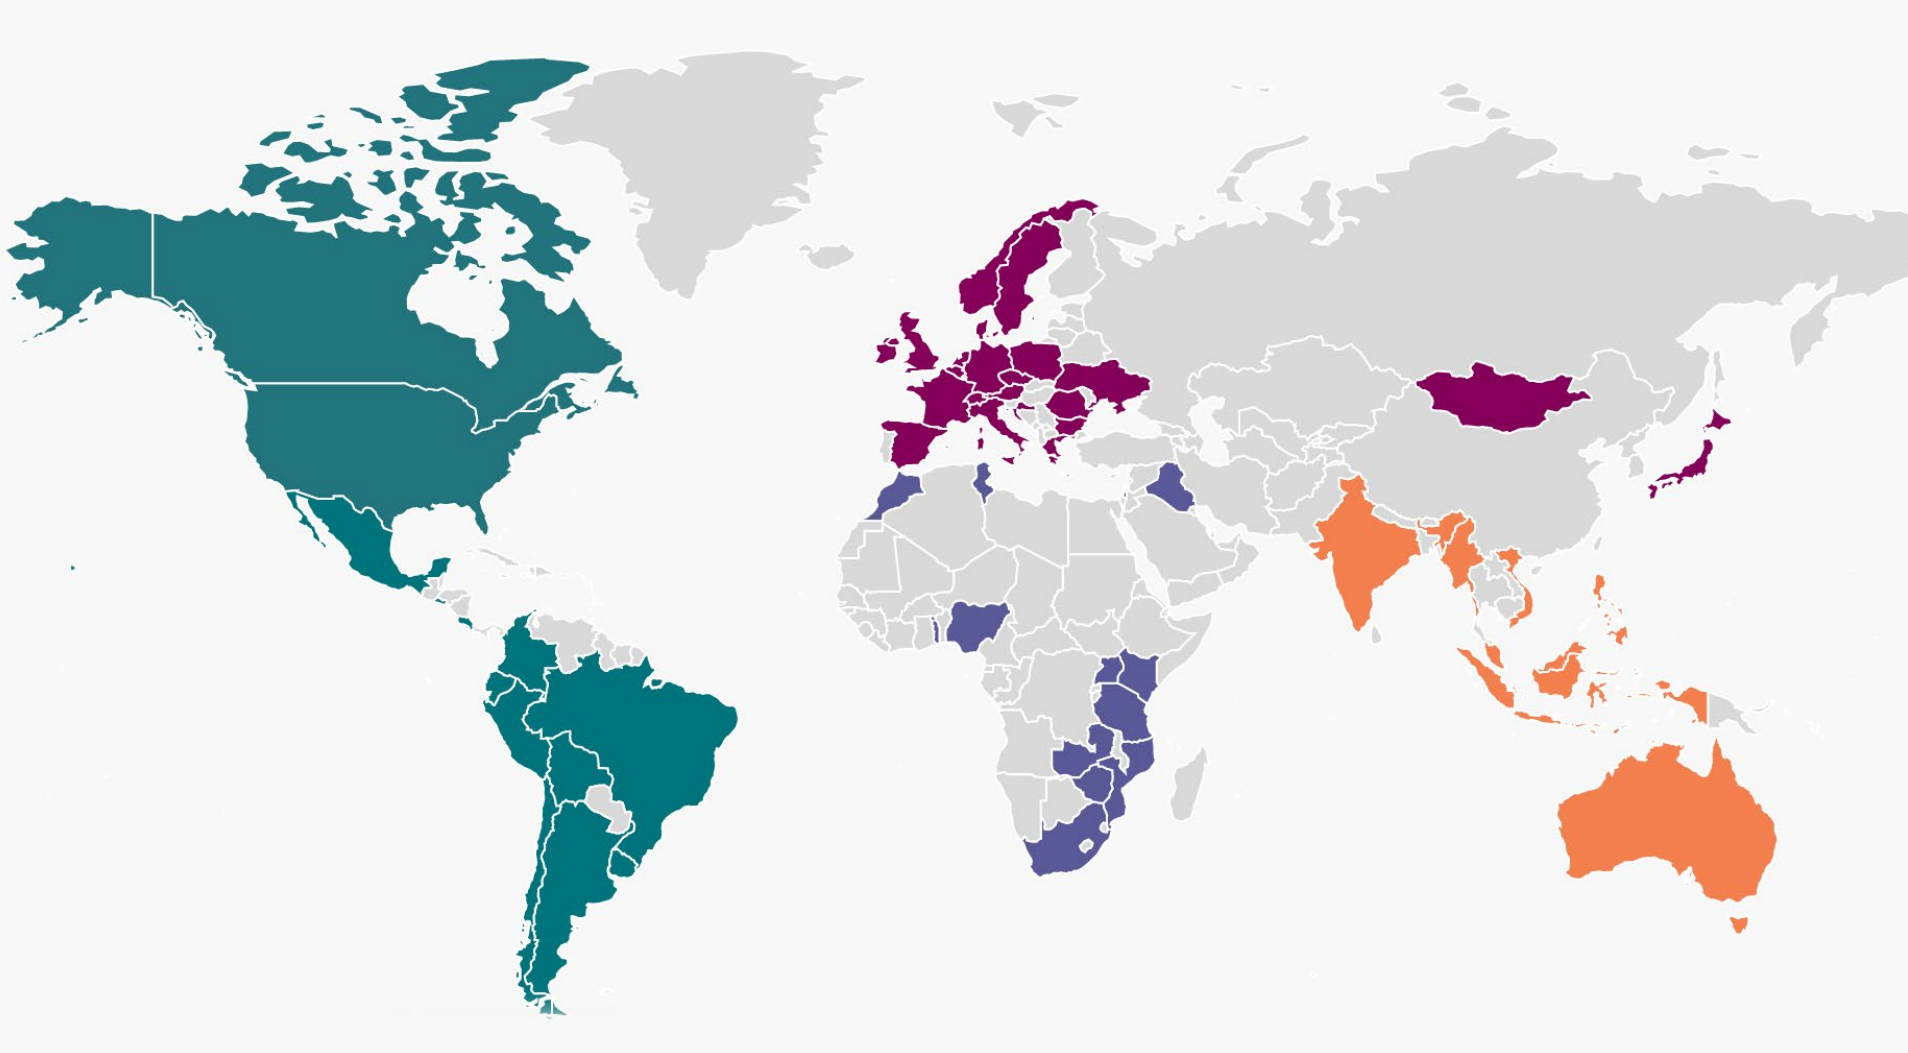

TNI strives to be a useful think tank for social movements. We work with activist-scholars to provide movements with the tools necessary to understand and take on the forces of wealth, power and control; analyses of developments that help movements stay one step ahead; and evidence-based argumentation. Activist-scholars can also serve as influential and visionary public intellectuals, and provide persuasive expertise in engagements with policy-makers and in the media. TNI also sees merit in building new generations of critical and radical intellectuals dedicated to serving the public good, providing a strong body of knowledge on which they can draw and build, and seeing knowledge production itself as a site of struggle.

MEDIA

TNI works with media to amplify the struggles of movements, to give visibility to progressive innovations, and to provide a critical perspective on the issues of the moment. This includes press outreach, active social media engagement as well as partnerships with progressive media platforms.

PROGRAMME ACHIEVEMENTS IN 2019

In support of our long-term goals, which also indicate the type of work TNI does, a five-year programme began in 2016. This is organized as seven broad programme areas each with an ambitious objective to be achieved by the end of 2020. As we enter the last year of the programme, we are very proud of how far we have come in meeting these objectives. Below are brief summaries in this regard, and some elaboration of indications that the programme is on track to achieve its goals.

“At Sintraemcali we’re very grateful to TNI for the support they provided to sustain our struggle against the privatisation of essential services. We value the way TNI relates with us, as the institute recognises the importance of organised labour in today’s economics and politics and gives us the tools to build or improve our own research and advocacy capabilities.”

Jhoni Trejos

Member of the Executive Board of the Union of Municipal Services Workers (Sintraemcali) of Cali, Colombia

OBJECTIVE 1

Move towards the establishment of a treaty for binding regulations for transnational corporations, which would end impunity, and secure justice for communities affected by corporate abuses.

In 2019, after just seven years of organizing and advocacy work, the treaty started to become a reality.

TNI's Corporate Power programme develops analysis and proposals on how to end corporate impunity and dismantle corporate power. A major vehicle for our work is the international Stop Corporate Impunity Campaign (Campaign), launched at Rio+20 in 2012. It is a loose network comprised of 238 organisations representing 260 million people, located primarily in the Global South. TNI has served as the main anchor of the Campaign, and has supported regional coordination hubs for Southern Africa, Asia and South America. The Campaign ensures the voices of affected communities are heard and amplified, and mobilizes international solidarity. In 2019, this included organization of a 'toxic tour' of Mexico involving members of the European Parliament and US Senate. The Campaign has sought to involve a broad range of social agents – including trade unions, farmers' organizations, people's health advocates, environmental activists, feminists and women's organizations. It has also catalysed an expanding international network of parliamentary supporters; a supportive network of legal experts, and is working to consolidate an international network of observatories. Following extensive consultations, the Campaign has facilitated the collation of proposals for what members would like to see in a prospective Treaty, and distilled key demands. These have been fed into the official process through advocacy efforts undertaken by members at national level as well as in Geneva, and the organization of side events and the submission of written and oral statements during the UN talks in Geneva. For the first time, in 2019 the Campaign convened an informal policy dialogue with sympathetic governments ahead of negotiations in Geneva.

TNI also played an important role in convening the broader Treaty Alliance of civil society organizations in 2014, with which the Campaign has coordinated strategies since. Together, we have campaigned for a mechanism by which transnational corporations would be held accountable for human rights abuses and violations of international human rights law. In 2019, we also invested in "Futures Labs" to study the increasing displacement of multilateralism with multistakeholderism at global governance level, and state capture by corporations at national levels.

Results

The key results to which TNI contributed significantly in 2019 include:

- 9 governments participate in an informal policy dialogue ahead of the Geneva negotiations, with two emerging as strong champions for the treaty
- 89 UN member states and 2 non-member states, along with a record number of civil society organizations, participated in the negotiations on the first revision of the draft treaty. China sent its most senior delegation to the talks to date.
- African states - led by South Africa and Namibia - presented a strong unified front in favour of the treaty.
- 847,000 people of Europe signed a petition supporting a treaty and against the investment dispute regime, which was presented to the EU representative during the Treaty talks.
- The EU participated constructively for the first time in the treaty negotiations, mounting a strong defence of ongoing civil society participation against moves by authoritarian governments to exclude civil society.
- 18 more sitting parliamentarians joined the 257-strong Global Inter-parliamentary Network (GIN) spanning 23 countries, which broadened its base to more green and social democratic parties. GIN had a visible presence in Geneva, organizing a side event attracting representatives from 15 states.
- GIN efforts saw a resolution passed in favour of the treaty in the Mercosur Parliament.
- 6 new members joined the Campaign, including from Benin, El Salvador and a Latin American network concerned with access to medicine.
- The Mexican toxic tour was strongly covered in national media, directly engaged the Minister of Environment, and resulted in one destructive project being cancelled.
- 400 organisations signed up to a letter protesting the strategic partnerships between the UN and the World Economic Forum in respect of the Sustainable Development Goals, a move many saw as outsourcing UN responsibilities to transnational corporations.

To establish the principle that the public interest and the integrity of national judicial systems should not be undermined by trade and investment rules, particularly investment disputes.

After eight years dogged work towards this objective, the principle we have sought to establish is gaining ever wider recognition. Advocacy efforts have prompted a reform process which began in 2019 under the rubric of the United Nations Center on International Trade Law (UNCITRAL), as well as a process to ‘modernise’ the Energy Charter Treaty (ECT) under which a spate of Investor-State Dispute Settlement (ISDS) cases are being brought as governments attempt to effect commitments to climate change mitigation.

TNI’s Trade & Investment programme critically follows trade and investment policies. In line with our mission, TNI provides well-researched analysis for social movements on social and ecological impacts, supporting public education, and the development of popular advocacy campaigns. These are geared towards alternative paradigms that prioritise the environment and people’s rights over corporate profits. We worked with hundreds of allies all over the world, helping to build a powerful movement working from local to international levels. We also developed a new network of academic lawyers willing to support efforts in Latin America. A key development in 2019 was the joining of forces in 2019 of trade campaigners and the international networks campaigning to stop corporate impunity. This saw co-ordinated action across Europe and Latin America. The Asia-Europe People’s Forum continued to provide a basis for ongoing coordination in that region. Cooperation with the 30-million-members-strong Public Services International saw concerted efforts to raise awareness of the perils of ISDS for public coffers among public sector workers in Africa.

The major focus of TNI’s work in 2019 continued to be investor protection clauses in Free Trade and Investment Agreements. The spotlight was kept on the ECT, which had been looking to expand its membership. It has proved a major and increasing source of ISDS cases obstructing efforts at energy transitions, and has put ISDS squarely on the agenda of climate activists. TNI and its partners also continued to monitor EU agreements with Singapore, Indonesia, Vietnam, Mexico, Mercosur and Canada, as well as the Trans Pacific Partnership II, the Asian Regional Comprehensive Economic Partnership negotiations, and developments in respect of China’s Belt and Road Initiative (BRI) investments and new instruments being developed for investor protections.

TNI (co) published a number of new papers, accompanied by videos and (social) media outreach; helped to conduct activist workshops on the various continents; responded to media requests for more information; and provided expert advice to government officials and political representatives.

Results

The key results to which TNI contributed significantly in 2019 include:

- 106 states and 70 observer organisations participated in the first UNCITRAL meeting held in New York in April to discuss reform of ISDS.
- 847,000 people in Europe sign a petition to scrap ISDS and support a Treaty to stop corporate impunity, presented to the EU Commission representative to the Human Rights Council in Geneva in October.
- The Dutch Labour Party withdrew its support for the EU-Canada agreement (CETA)
- 100 candidate Members of the European Parliament pledged to oppose ISDS.
- The ECT secretariat launched a process of ‘modernization’ prompted by advocacy on ISDS, and suspended expansion of membership.
- Luxemburg’s Energy Minister publicly denounced the ECT threatening to withdraw if reform negotiations are unsuccessful.
- A major public debate has been catalysed in Spain, following a number of ISDS cases brought under the ECT, with TNI as a major go-to point for journalists.
- Parties to the Asian Regional Comprehensive Economic Partnership dropped ISDS from its negotiations, with Malaysia and South Korea taking outspoken positions against ISDS following advocacy by TNI partners in those countries.
- Following strong advocacy by partners, the Foreign Affairs Commission of the Argentine Senate discussed a proposed law requiring the Executive to inform the Congress of impact assessments of Free Trade Agreements before these may be signed by the government.

To improve climate, energy and food security policies that would redirect trade and investment towards sustainable and inclusive food and energy systems, and which would genuinely address climate change challenges.

Policies promoting large-scale, capital and energy intensive, and extractive forms of resource appropriation are everywhere disrupting locally adapted, culturally appropriate, mostly small-scale, and labour-intensive food production with profound social and environmental consequences.

TNI's Agrarian & Environmental Justice programme supports small-scale food producers, trade unions and environmental organizations in their advocacy for more sustainable and inclusive food and energy systems, and greater convergence of their respective positions and agendas.

TNI continues to provide materials for its allies that explain the problem with the extractive model. In 2019, this included a report on the history of Dutch land struggles by local small-scale agro-ecological farmers. This was complemented by another on how EU policies enable land grabs elsewhere in the world. Meanwhile, TNI sponsored a school in Tunisia attended by farmers and activists from 6 countries in the region. A well-received report on extractivism in the region was launched there, marking the start of TNI's new focus on the region.

With our fisher allies, we continued to unpack the Blue Growth agenda. This purports to respond to contemporary challenges by promising to conserve the seas, provide more protein as food, and promote renewable energy. Closer analysis belies these promises. TNI works with small-scale fisher organisations to develop critical responses, and to defend the principles won in the Small-scale Fisheries \(SSF\) Guidelines. In 2019, we worked with affiliates in Indonesia and Mauritius, both with sizeable small-scale fishing communities, to document the impacts of Marine Spatial Planning (MSP). This is a zoning process which ostensibly minimizes conflicts over access to land and sea. Again, it is clear that in practice small-scale fishers are not sufficiently considered stakeholders, much less rights holders. Instead, corporate interests are privileged, including ongoing mining, oil and gas extraction. We helped organize the Ocean Peoples' Conference in Oslo as a counter to the official Blue Growth conference, and have provided support while allies deliberated on strategy within the working group on fisheries of the International Planning Committee on Food Sovereignty (IPC). The IPC has been a key platform from which Guidelines on Land Tenure and Small-scale Fisher Rights have been won, as well as the recently approved UN Declaration on the Rights of Peasants.

Promoting food sovereignty is the second major focus for TNI and a vision developed by the global small-scale food producer organizations with which TNI works most closely. It is also the vision of two new projects in which TNI is involved on the European front. One concerns 'community-supported fisheries' and the other concerns 'community-supported agro-ecological farmers'. Partners in both advocate public policies to support direct producer-consumer relations at local level. They argue this as a sustainable alternative to the prevailing imperative towards ever larger and more intensive agriculture geared for export, which has become a major environmental threat and contributor to climate change. This kind of 'fish/farm to fork' idea, supported by local governments, was also put on the agenda at TNI's Future is Public Conference (see Public Alternatives).

The third focus for TNI is just transitions. In a year marked by acute environmental disasters and massive protests, climate was firmly top of the agenda in 2019. TNI has participated in various collective efforts to develop a common vision between small-scale food producers and environmentalists. We also participated in deliberations between trade unions and environmentalists in South Africa, Nigeria and the Americas, as well as broader intersectional meetings preparing for the UN Climate Summit. One exciting outcome was an emerging common vision of just transitions.

Meanwhile, TNI continued its cooperation with the international academic network of the Emancipatory Rural Politics Initiative, and other related research projects coordinated by the Institute for Social Studies of Erasmus University Rotterdam. These are linked to the Journal of Peasant Studies, edited by TNI Fellow, Jun Borrás. The network provides intellectual resources useful to the movements.

Results

The key results to which TNI contributed significantly in 2019 include:

- A strong, intersectional and common vision emerges on just transitions.
- The Ocean Peoples' Conference uses TNI's critique of Blue Economy, and puts the issue on agendas of Norwegian and South Pacific trade campaigners.
- Indonesian fisher organization, KNTI, uses TNI's report on Marine Spatial Planning to expand alliances and in advocacy towards policy-makers.
- The North African Food Sovereignty Network grows by 6 members, and expands to 5 countries.
- The Dutch Federation of Agroecology Farmers (Federatie van Agro-ecologische Boeren) is born, conceived at a TNI co-convened conference the year before. It was able to provide an alternative voice on sustainable farming during the agri-business-organised protests against state efforts to reduce nitrogen emissions.

A group of approximately ten people are standing in a field, possibly a farm or agricultural setting. They are dressed in casual work clothes, including hats and long-sleeved shirts. The scene is overlaid with a solid blue color, which makes the details of the people and the field less distinct. The background shows a line of trees under a cloudy sky.

To advance viable, feasible and progressive proposals on the democratic provision and financing of public goods and services.

A major challenge for proponents of public alternatives is the question of how to finance them. After a year's work, TNI published a widely appreciated book, 'Public Finance for the Future We Want', accompanied by a video, infographics, an executive summary and policy recommendations for wide dissemination purposes. With the production of this resource, the programme has achieved the five-year goal it set itself with a solid body of viable and feasible proposals produced. It is now a question of putting these ideas into movement.

TNI's Public Alternatives programme works to build a strong countervailing force that reverses privatization and helps construct democratic, effective, and universally accessible public services. Strategies include the promotion of public-public partnerships, partnerships between public companies and community cooperatives, making visible stories of success. TNI supports struggles in specific countries, providing international perspectives, network linkages, mutual learning opportunities and reflections on democratic political practice as a necessary precondition for public alternatives. We also provide resources of common value to the movements, translated into many languages and accompanied by popular materials.

In 2019, there was a high demand for TNI resources from Japanese activists concerned that new laws allow private financing of water services. The Japanese edition of our book, Reclaiming Public Services, which presents the latest trend towards re-municipalisation, attracted significant media attention and became an important reference during parliamentary debates. In the city of Hamamatsu, the mayor abandoned his proposal to privatise drinking water after 600 residents gathered to express their opposition to the plan.

In Nigeria, TNI supported the organization of a national water summit in Abuja by trade union and environmental partners. The summit was attended by 150 people, including relevant policymakers and garnered coverage by 20 national newspapers. We also continued to work with South African trade unions and environmental organizations on the complex question of the threatened unbundling of the beleaguered national energy utility – widely perceived as a precursor to privatization – and how to achieve a just transition away from the country's dependence on fossil fuels while also addressing questions of energy poverty as well as broader issues of inequality and democratisation. The process produced remarkable unity between unions in competing federations, as well as with key environmental organisations.

In Latin America, TNI provided ongoing support to the Platform for Public Community Agreements of the Americas (PAPC), which fosters community-public partnerships on water. PAPC involved 52 organisations from 6 countries in mutual learning exchanges, including associations of community aqueducts, trade unions, social and environmental organizations concerned with strengthening community water management and the defence of water as a common good and fundamental human right. TNI also continued to support the public sector union of Cali (Colombia) in their successful struggle against the privatization of the telecommunications section of their company. The company subsequently signed a public-public partnership with a strong Uruguayan counterpart, with which TNI has had historical relations at both union and company level.

On the European front, TNI participates in mPower, a collaborative project led by the University of Glasgow, which involves peer-to-peer learning among 100 European municipalities. It is aimed at achieving large scale, replicable success in respect of energy democracy and just transitions. In 2019, mPower provided a bespoke peer learning programme for 27 local authorities, as well as seven in-person trainings, with 6 municipalities subsequently declaring a climate emergency. TNI coordinated dissemination of the best practices which emerged from these encounters.

We also co-organized a second regional Eastern European New Politics seminar in Prague in 2019. This resulted in plans for an ongoing project to reflect on Eastern European democratic imaginaries since 1989, expected to consolidate the network in the region.

TNI engaged with the UK Labour Party's National Policy Forum on public ownership of water and energy, provided a study of Portugal's radical anti-austerity programmes, and facilitated input from Paris' public water utility that was brought back under public management 10 years prior. With the production of this resource, the programme has achieved the five-year goal it set itself with a solid body of viable and feasible proposals produced. It is now a question of putting these ideas into movement.

The year ended with a major international conference on democratic ownership of the economy co-organized by TNI, De 99 van Amsterdam – a new think tank supported by the City – and 16 international partners. Held in a mosque and Ghanaian church in a marginalized neighbourhood of Amsterdam, the conference was attended by 332 people from 35 countries, including municipalities, trade unions, researchers, sector professionals, politicians, journalists, campaign organisations, and philanthropic foundations. The conference provided a much appreciated space for alliance-building among diverse advocates and movements, as well as empowerment for the host communities. It resulted in a half-hour broadcast of the Laura Flanders show in the USA, extended collaboration with the University of Glasgow to jointly build an interactive global database of (re) municipalisation as a public resource, and plans for a follow-up conference in Amsterdam in 2020.

The conference culminated with the second annual Transformative Cities awards, broadcast live and followed by audiences in 11 countries. 34 submissions from 24 countries were documented by journalists, and added to the Atlas of Utopias; short-lists were developed by an international panel and were subject to popular voting by 11,000 people mobilized by local groups vying for support. The winning entries gained publicity in their own countries affirming their efforts and empowering their advocacy on universal water access, housing for all, democratic energy transitions, and sustainable food systems.

Results

The key results to which TNI contributed significantly in 2019 include:

- Hamamatsu (Japan) abandoned plans to privatise drinking water. TNI's remunicipalisation book received widespread media coverage and became an important reference in parliamentary debates.
- The Abuja (Nigeria) National Water Summit was organized and covered by 20 national newspapers.
- The ailing Calí public utility signs a public-public partnership in respect of its telecommunications section with a successful counterpart in Uruguay.
- 52 organisations from 6 countries in Latin America engaged in peer learning on community-managed water systems.
- The Atlas of Utopias attracted 19,000 unique visitors and 11,000 people participated in the voting for the Transformative Cities awards.
- South African unions across two competing federations, as well as key environmental groups, united in opposition to privatization of the national power company and for a just energy transition.
- 27 European municipalities participate in mPower mutual learning on just energy transitions, and 6 declare a climate emergency.

OBJECTIVE 5

To reassess the conventional repressive drugs policy approaches in favour of pragmatic policies based on harm reduction, human rights, and development principles.

Over the past twenty years, TNI has earned a reputation for developing innovative drug policy proposals and promoting these through effective advocacy. We consider issues of conflict, development and democracy and are guided by principles of harm reduction and human rights for producers, as well as users. TNI is regarded as one of the most knowledgeable watchdogs of the UN drug control system and our advice is often sought by government officials, UN agencies, and NGOs. TNI's Informal Drug Policy Dialogues have brought government officials from more than 30 countries together with representatives of international agencies and civil society for open-minded and confidential strategy debates about drug policy changes. TNI has cultivated a strong network of legal experts to develop concrete proposals for national drug law reforms and for the modernization of the UN treaty system. At the same time, TNI also has its feet firmly on the ground. We work closely with rural communities involved in illicit cultivation of coca, opium poppy and cannabis, including in complicated conflict situations like in Colombia and Myanmar, where TNI has been involved in peace building efforts for many years. TNI helps small-scale producers across the world to find a voice in national and international policy spaces.

The emerging legal global cannabis market has been a key focus for TNI in 2019. This includes the historical moment to win global recognition for the medical usefulness of cannabis based on a World Health Organisation (WHO) cannabis review process. WHO has tabled a number of recommendations to reclassify the plant and its components, which will be put to a UN vote. TNI actively engaged in the debates and published an in-depth briefing about the implications of these changes while pushing for a more critical review, since the proposed changes do not properly reflect the opportunities at stake. This includes the opportunity for the emerging medical cannabis market to include and benefit small-scale traditional farmers. TNI has taken the initiative to support and defend their right to access and participate in the debates. With partners organizing among small-scale farmers, TNI has developed a proposal for a UN drugs treaty modification which could provide a basis for setting the terms required to reach fair(er) and more inclusive trade for those impoverished communities which have depended on the illegal market for so long. TNI also supported the establishment of a regional Caribbean group of local cannabis growers that could give voice to concerns and proposals in engagements with their governments and at regional level. Together with the government of Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, TNI organised a workshop to discuss a strategy for fair(er) trade in cannabis. This saw the establishment of a new group of activists, academics and policy makers from the region that will work together to draft a position paper on cannabis policies in the Caribbean. Similar efforts in Morocco continued throughout the year.

In Europe, several city and regional authorities are developing initiatives to regulate their local cannabis market. TNI brought together several of these in producing a study comparing progress in 6 countries, and uncovering the policy dilemmas faced by local authorities and civil society groups alike. The outputs were shared with policy makers, local authorities, civil society, media and academics to provide input for local as well as national and EU level policy discussions.

TNI also launched a report on the smokable cocaine market in Latin America and the Caribbean. This is the result of a longstanding collaboration with harm reduction groups in the region advocating that governments take effective action. Policies for users of this substance tend to be merely repressive and only exacerbate related problems, while access to health services is extremely limited, leading to extreme human suffering in many urban centres.

Organised farmers from both Colombia and Myanmar were able to make inputs to the Commission on Narcotic Drugs in 2019 describing the conditions of their communities and making a plea for a peace-building and development-oriented approach to the drugs question. TNI helped partners in Colombia in several ways to defend and deepen the peace process, which is threatened following political changes, widespread assassinations of local social leaders, and government intentions to resume chemical spraying of coca fields. TNI also helped build the Myanmar Opium Farmers' Forum (MOFF), including linking opium farmers' families and a drugs users' network. The MOFF was able to build relations with the Office of the Narcotics Control Board, has attained some legitimacy in engaging with Myanmar government officials, and its annual statement articulating the conditions and needs of the communities it represents provided a basis for parliamentary questions. A MOFF/TNI film documenting the lives of opium farmers in Myanmar won the best documentary award at the only national film festival in Myanmar (See also under Results for our Myanmar programme). Based on the grounded knowledge of its team in the country, TNI challenged a dangerously misleading UN Office for Drug Control (UNODC) report which blamed increased opium production on local ethnic armed organisations in territories, in fact, under government control. This resulted in UNODC issuing a clarification, if not a correction.

TNI co-organised the 10th Asian Informal Drugs Policy Dialogue in Myanmar, which was attended by governments, experts and civil society organisations from 11 countries in the region. The dialogue nudged governments towards a less repressive and more harm reduction oriented approach, with Myanmar, Thailand and Malaysia providing a lead on reform. Input from TNI included a policy briefing on methamphetamine use in the region.

Results

The key results to which TNI contributed significantly in 2019 include:

- A new Caribbean group developing a cannabis policy, based on fair trade principals, is established.
- Fair trade medical cannabis is put on the agenda of national governments in the Caribbean, Morocco as well as of UN bodies.
- A strengthened MOFF able to engage, without fear of reprisals, in national policy processes in Myanmar.
- Discernible progress on reform in a less repressive, more harm reduction oriented direction among some key Asian governments.

OBJECTIVE 6

To make publicly visible the permanent state of war and the pacification of resistance.

TNI's War and Pacification programme is concerned with analysing and exposing the drivers and consequences for human rights and democracy of the state of permanent war, particularly in the context of the authoritarian trend that is discernibly growing globally. Similarly, it interrogates the pacification of resistance and attempts to criminalise dissent and solidarity. The latter was particularly relevant in 2019 which has been dubbed the year of protest for the sheer number of places where fed-up citizens took to the streets against their governments, and which were marked by a global pattern of brutal policing and extreme repression.

In 2019, TNI's work focused on the corporate drivers of militarised border policies; explored progressive alternatives to counter-terrorism policies; and began a new pan-European project looking at the structural drivers of institutionalized anti-Muslim racism. In the spirit of the latter, TNI co-published a well-publicised statement denouncing Dutch legislation to ban women wearing the niqab, which was picked up by the UN Special Rapporteur on Racism who was outspoken about the ban on her visit to the Netherlands. We also continued to monitor and publish analysis of ongoing and threatened wars -- notably in Syria following the US withdrawal of troops from Kurdish areas, and provocations in respect of Iran on the part of the US and UK-- as well as the fragile peace in Colombia and Myanmar (see more under Results for our Drugs and Myanmar programmes).

We produced three new reports in our Border Wars series, placing the border security industrial complex firmly on the agenda of many NGOs working on issues of migration. We provided solid, well-sourced evidence regarding the role played by corporate actors in shaping border politics making them increasingly militarized and hostile to those seeking asylum. TNI published The Business of Building Walls to coincide with the 30th anniversary since the fall of the Berlin Wall, which sparked widespread media attention in 30 countries including The Independent, Al Jazeera and Euronews. A second report concerned the US-Mexico border, More than a Wall, which was also very well received, notably by Agence France Press and Mexican media. We also received interesting feedback from an employee of a federal contractor in the USA who had read the report and would like to learn more about the role of private contractors in shaping militarised borders. The third report, Guarding the Fortress, concerned the role of the European Border and Coast Guard Agency in militarising borders and criminalising migrants, undermining fundamental rights to freedom of movement and the right to asylum. TNI was invited to present its borders research at a gathering in Tunisia of African and European political and UN representatives, activists, academics, and NGOs. Our critical framing of border externalization was highly valued by participants present from countries such as Mali and Niger, who experience the direct consequences of European border policies and the devastating impact on their national and regional contexts. The UN Working Group on Mercenaries also reached out, finding our framing particularly useful with regard to the role of private actors and their influence on border politics. TNI was also invited to host an informative panel at Sabir Festival of Mediterranean Cultures in the south of Italy, which discussed how the militarization of borders has become a globalized phenomenon. Many European-based activists and NGOs later reported finding our panel particularly insightful and informative in joining the dots between border policies in the Americas, Asia, Africa and the EU. In particular, we were commended for including a discussion on the role of China, the Belt and Road Initiative and its impact on ports and movement. TNI also travelled to key border regions in the Americas, including the Mexican border with Guatemala and the Colombian border with Venezuela, to observe first hand border dynamics and to meet with partners and consolidate relations.

TNI brought together a group of critical security and counter-terrorism analysts based in Britain, who produced a unique progressive policy document titled Leaving the War on Terror. This policy document is the first of its kind in that it goes beyond simply criticising Britain's role in the War on Terror and its counter-terrorism policies, and actively proposes an alternative approach to what security should look like. It was the subject of a panel discussion held during the Imagine Belfast Festival of Ideas and Politics. The report was launched to a full house at the House of Commons at an event hosted by the Shadow Home Secretary. There was much engagement with the report on social media platforms with 1,252 downloads and 2,600 views of the accompanying video in the first week alone. The report has been praised by political figures within the Labour Party, as well as activists and academics alike for its invaluable contribution in shifting the narrative from a militarised model of security to interrogating what security really means for us as we go about our daily lives. TNI also submitted input to the UN Special Rapporteur on the Promotion and Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms while Countering Terrorism. She conveyed that she found the framing particularly useful for her report on soft law and countering violent extremism (CVE) in moving the conversation beyond counter-terrorism, and looking at how it impacts our sense of security more broadly almost twenty years since 9/11 launched the state of permanent war.

The year culminated with the publication of a book on the Far Right by TNI Associate Walden Bello, and support for a well-attended Europe-wide promotion tour. In addition, TNI co-published a report which reflects interviews with over 80 progressive activists around the world on the threat of the far-right. The consensus view emerging from the latter was that the far-right has been able to capitalise on popular discontent with economic globalisation, and popularise a racist theory of a “great replacement” underway through migration. Contributors identify weaknesses as the inability of the far-right to deal with climate issues and the encouraging internationalism catalysed by concerns about climate change as key to any counter.

Results

The key results to which TNI contributed significantly in 2019 include:

- The UN Special Rapporteur on Racism was outspoken about the niqab ban on her visit to the Netherlands.
- Media attention in 30 countries for report The Business of Building Walls.
- Leaving the War on Terror report garners 1,252 downloads and 2,600 views of the accompanying video in the first week after publication.
- Deloitte employees morally outraged by family separations on the US southern border and the role of the company as a federal contractor for ICE and United States Customs and Border Protection read our report and ask for more information.
- The UN Working Group on Mercenaries use our reports for a workshop.

OBJECTIVE 7

To support civil society organisations in Myanmar in addressing ethnic conflict to make the current peace and political and economic reform process more inclusive.

TNI's Myanmar programme works to strengthen ethnic-based civil society organisations (CSOs) and Ethnic Armed Organisations (EAOs) to engage in policy development with respect to land and related resources, and drugs. TNI is helping to build the capacity and confidence of opium farmers and other rural working people (including fishers), with an emphasis on women, youth and internally displaced people (IDPs), to develop their own policy position; to normalize dialogues with EAOs towards achieving a social compact; and to facilitate people-to-people exchanges among the regions to collectively strengthen their engagements with the Myanmar national state on common policy areas. TNI works in Karen, Kachin, Karenni, Mon, Shan and Kayah States and Tanintharyi Region, and at the national level. It brings international context and experiences to bear on the process, and helps CSOs to analyse national legal proposals and understand their implications for grassroots communities while encouraging them to articulate their own perspectives.

In 2019, as an outcome of processes TNI has facilitated since 2013, two EAOs finalised land and natural resource policies, bringing to four the total number of finalized EAO land policies developed with support from TNI. Based on research and consultation, these policies reflect customary practices and tenure systems in use in different ethnic regions. Implemented by EAOs on the ground, they provide evidence that recognising customary systems is possible and contributing to environmental sustainability and peace building. These policies serve to promote a more inclusive and democratic land governance vision for the country, including in peace negotiations between EAOs and the government. They reflect international best practices, including on the right to land for women as well as for displaced communities, and have been developed in close cooperation with local civil society organisations (CSO) and through extensive grassroots consultations. CSOs are often in the lead in policy development, thanks to the capacity-building support they have received from TNI and the Myanmar NGO partners with which cooperation has been built over the years.

TNI also brought representatives from these different land policy processes and from key ethnic-based CSOs with which we have been working for many years, to strategise together. After developing a joint position on the critical issue of recognition of customary tenure, these same CSOs and EAOs next began discussing a federal land law and began working on drafting a framework for engaging with this.

TNI has also facilitated processes with The Border Consortium (TBC) since 2014. In 2019, representatives of internally displaced people (IDP) and refugee committees from Mon, Karen, Karenni, Shan and Kachin communities came together and developed a joint position paper on their right to land. They presented their shared vision in separate meetings with international donors, with ethnic political parties, and at a public launch.

Meanwhile, TNI continued to support the Myanmar Opium Farmers' Forum (MOFF) in various activities. As opium farmers' livelihoods are still criminalised by law, speaking up for themselves is difficult but necessary, and 2019 brought several milestones. MOFF members joined an exchange visited to the Illicit Crop Monitoring Survey Team of the Thai Office of the Narcotics Control Board (ONCB) in Chiang Mai and joined an ONCB illicit crop monitoring and eradication team visit to a Lahu village. This gave them insights into alternative policy options as well the possibility of more positive relations between government and opium farmers as practiced in Thailand. Also, the MOFF/TNI film 'The lives of producers of prohibited plants in Myanmar' won the award for best documentary at the Wathann Film Festival. MOFF representatives introduced the film in person, bearing testimony to their growing confidence to speak out in public about their plight. Finally, the official statement from MOFF's annual forum was read out at the Governmental Central Committee for Drug Abuse Control (CCDAC) coordination meeting. It was used by the National League for Democracy (NLD) to raise questions in the national parliament.

In other work in 2019, TNI organised a political economy crash course on demand for 125 CSO representatives. They gained deeper understanding of the paradigms driving the world's economy and how they impact on national and local conditions. The course provided participants with analytical tools to help interpret and navigate developments unfolding around them, thus better positioning them to shape positive investments.

Meanwhile, TNI's report 'Selling the Silk Road Spirit – China's Belt and Road Initiative in Myanmar', based on Chinese language sources and thus bringing a new perspective, received significant attention in the Myanmar media. It was used in workshops by CSOs and ethnic political parties to strategise and develop policy to address the negative impacts of Chinese investment in Myanmar.

Finally, taking on a very sensitive subject, TNI's report 'Arakan \(Rakhine State\): A Land in Conflict on Myanmar's Western Frontier' was well received by key local and international actors. Outlining grievances and aspirations of Buddhist Rakhine and Muslim Rohingya political movements, the report shows how Arakan represents Myanmar's post-colonial failures in microcosm: ethnic conflict, political impasse, militarisation, economic neglect and the marginalisation of local peoples.

Results

The key results to which TNI contributed significantly in 2019 include:

- A further two ethnic regions (now four in total) produced land and natural resource policies reflecting local customary practices and tenure systems, developed by CSOs and implemented by EAOs
- Cross-regional cooperation between CSOs and EAOs result in agreement on customary tenure, and cooperation towards a common position towards a federal land law.
- IDPs and refugee committees from five ethnic minority regions develop a joint position on land rights which they present to international donors, ethnic political parties, and publically.
- The Myanmar Opium Farmers' Forum grows in confidence, develops relations with the Office of the Narcotics Control Board, and with government officials. Their film wins best documentary at the main national film festival.
- 125 CSOs participate in an international political economy course providing them with tools for understanding the bigger context for contestations over development paths.
- CSOs and ethnic political parties are able to develop responses to Chinese investments based on accurate information on Chinese strategies towards Myanmar. The report garners significant media attention in Myanmar.
- A report on Rakhine State provides a perspective from both Buddhist and Muslim communities is well received by local and international actors.

BOARD REPORT

The foundation “Stichting Transnational Institute” was registered with the Dutch Chamber of Commerce on 21 March 1974.

The objectives of the foundation are to strive for a world of peace, equity and democracy on a sustainable planet brought about and supported by an informed and engaged citizenry, as well as all that is directly or indirectly connected therewith or may be conducive thereto, all to be interpreted in the broadest sense, if in the general interest. The foundation seeks to realise its objectives, inter alia, by

- a) strengthening the capacity of progressive international social movements to advocate for change
- b) acting as a unique nexus between social movements, engaged scholars and policy makers
- c) producing rigorous research and analysis
- d) organising international conferences; and
- e) collaborating with other organisations worldwide

The governance structure of TNI is set up as follows:

- The Supervisory Board, which is responsible for supervising the management of the Foundation and the general course of affairs, and to provide the Management Board with advice.
- The Management Board (Executive Director), which is responsible for the realisation of the objects of the Foundation, the strategy, the policy and the results thereof.
- The Fellowship consisting of recognised international experts in the substantive areas that are relevant for the work of TNI, which also advises the Supervisory and the Management Board on issues of substance.
- The Board of Advisors, composed of eminent international experts, which renders assistance to the organisation in more general terms.

The structure is set out below:

The composition of each of these organs is based on a careful balance to ensure participation of the various stakeholders relevant for TNI and to reflect its international composition and orientation as well as its ambitions. This includes considerations of gender, continental representation, scholarly capacity, engagement with social movements TNI seeks to serve, as well as the relevant disciplines and skills required by TNI.

Composition of the Supervisory Board in 2019

The Supervisory Board is selected on the basis of the criteria laid down in the by-laws, and profiles which are regularly reviewed and revised. A committee – comprised of one Supervisory Board member, one staff member (usually the Executive Director), and one fellow – interviews candidates and makes a recommendation to the Supervisory Board, which makes the final decision.

The Supervisory Board members serve a four-year term, once renewable, and are not remunerated. The Supervisory Board meets at least three times per year to discuss the progress of the organisational activities. Detailed information about the Supervisory Board members can be found on the TNI website here.

Susan George has served as President of TNI since 2015, which is an honorary position.

The composition of the Supervisory Board in 2019 was as follows:

Gisela Dütting	15/04/2016 – 29/03/2019 (2nd term)
Pauline Tiffen	12/12/2014 – 11/12/2022 (2nd term)
Frenk van Enckevort	15/06/2018 – 14/06/2022 (1st term)
Ruth Kronenburg	29/10/2018 – 28/10/2022 (1st term)

There were some changes to the Supervisory Board in 2019, all formalized at its meeting of 29 March 2019. Gisela Dütting, the Chairperson, stepped out of the Board. This resulted in a reshuffle of portfolios among remaining Board members. Pauline Tiffen took on the role of Chairperson, Ruth Kronenburg that of Audit Committee, and Frenk van Enckevort that of Secretary.

The Board serves voluntarily and is not remunerated.

Composition of the Management Board

The Management Board consists of one person – the Executive Director, Fiona Dove. The following staff report directly to her: the Personnel Officer, Programme Coordinators, Communication Coordinator, Evaluation Officer and Community Builder.

The leadership expected from the Executive Director is to provide vision and to help staff think strategically. She is supported in the daily management by a Management Team comprised of the Personnel Officer, Programme Coordinators and Communication Coordinator, which meets weekly.

The Supervisory Board determines the remuneration of the Executive Director. The remuneration complies with both the guidelines of Goede Doelen Nederland as well as those of the Dutch Government (Wet Normering Topinkomens).

Remuneration of the Management Board/Executive Director:

Gross salary	80.608	82.713
Holiday pay	6.405	6.520
End of year payment	500	500
	87.513	90.733
Taxes and premiums paid by TNI	9.702	10.402
Pension contribution from TNI	9.800	10.354
	107.015	110.489

Composition of the International Fellowship

Fellows work with the TNI programmes closest to their specific areas of expertise, producing relevant analyses and commentaries, often linking TNI to broader scholarly communities. They meet together at least once a year for the annual Fellows' Meeting. These meetings take stock of the implications of recent global developments, enabling TNI to assess the context in which it is working. We also explore emerging questions, bringing in additional expertise where necessary, helping TNI 'stay ahead of the curve' and to think openly and critically about the big issues.

Fellows serve a four-year term, renewable once. Detailed information about the current Fellowship can be found on the TNI website. The current composition of the Fellowship is as follows:

Achin Vanaik (India)	3 December 2015	31 December 2019
Ben Hayes (UK)	30 September 2015	31 December 2019
David Fig (South Africa)	21 September 2015	31 December 2019
Phyllis Bennis (USA)	15 April 2015	31 December 2019
Hilary Wainwright (UK)	15 April 2015	31 December 2019
Daniel Chavez (Uruguay)	15 April 2015	31 December 2019
Edgardo Lander (Venezuela)	15 April 2015	31 December 2019
Jun Borrás (Philippines)	15 April 2015	31 December 2019

Former Fellows join the ranks of TNI Associates, which may also include other researchers and scholars who make substantial ongoing contributions to the TNI community. Together, they constitute the ‘think tank’ dimension of TNI.

The current term of office of the Fellowship expired at the end of 2019. TNI has been undertaking an extensive process of evaluation and consultation with a view to reconstituting the various structures of TNI, including the role of Fellows and Associates, from 2020 onwards.

‘Futures Labs’ were introduced as an innovation in 2019. These are conceived as working groups on key issues of the future which TNI needs to understand better. The three key subjects identified include the trend away from multilateralism and towards multistakeholderism; the advent of the data capitalism; and the globalisation of Chinese corporations. The first took the form of a special seminar, which is now feeding into new work being developed by one of our existing programmes. The second took the form of commissions of a series of articles, the identification of knowledgeable scholars and activist organisations with whom TNI might cooperate, and the beginnings of a new area of work which all our programmes are considering how to integrate. The third has involved proactive identification of knowledgeable scholars, particularly Chinese scholars, analysing the Belt and Road Initiative and developing a framework paper to help TNI and its allies rise to the challenges posed.

Composition of the International Advisory Board

The International Advisory Board, and its composition, is under consideration. It was not operational in 2019.

TNI regularly assesses legal; security; financial; reputational; and operational risks. Overall risks are assessed annually in terms of probability and severity of impact and improved mitigation measures put in place where necessary. An inventory is under development, which will provide the organisation with a comprehensive matrix for monitoring purposes.

Below the key risks addressed in 2019, and identified for 2020 are discussed.

Covid-19

An important risk identified for 2020 is the outbreak of the Covid-19 pandemic. Measures taken to ensure the safety of staff include the closing of the office, allowing staff to work from home, and arranging regular online team and staff meetings until it is officially deemed safe to reopen the office. There are also risks associated with lock-downs during the Corona crisis, whereby most people work from home and often outside of secured computer network systems. Efforts to ensure cyber security awareness continued to mitigate breaches (see more on cyber security below).

In preparation for the reopening of the office, plans have been made to minimize contact risk. These include allowing those who need to travel by public transport or who feel particularly vulnerable or who suspect they may be infected to continue working from home until it is safe to return; arranging shifts to ensure not too many people are in the office at the same time; the provision of appropriate equipment, such as shields between desks, the availability of sanitisers, gloves and masks; and agreement on safety protocols.

No travel or physical events are foreseen for 2020, with most activities going online where possible, or otherwise postponed. All programmes will revise plans and budgets accordingly, in discussion with partners and funders as required. Every effort will be made to minimize the financial impact on TNI, its staff including freelancers, and its partners.

There is some anticipation that the subsequent economic crisis may impact on funders, particularly private foundations that rely on invested capital. Mitigation strategies include diversifying the funding base.

Security and safety

Security and safety remains a key risk to monitor in 2020. There is acute awareness of the growing climate of repression against progressive activists discernible across the world, including against partner organizations. Key risk mitigation measures put in place in this regard in 2019 are elaborated below.

Myanmar

Our Myanmar programme involves people from conflict zones in a deteriorating political context. In 2019, a thorough matrix of risks was developed, which is assessed and updated annually for probability and severity, and includes considered mitigation strategies. Mitigation strategies followed in 2019, for example, included moving meetings to neighbouring countries for the safety of participants. In 2020, local staff will be required to fill in risk assessments for each activity organized.

Data security and safe communications

A comprehensive Information & Communication Technology (ICT) policy, including data protection, data security and data breach policies and procedures, was adopted in 2019, codifying many pre-existing practices. This was developed with external expert support, and workshopped with staff before being finally approved by the Supervisory Board. Staff are well educated about the need to be compliant with the General Data Protection Regulation (GDPR). This is regularly checked under the responsibility of management staff.

TNI's Computer Support team regularly educates staff on safe communications, raising awareness of the pitfalls of certain applications and platforms and the merits of others. The team has created a TNI 'next cloud' held on a number of servers in The Netherlands which gives remote access shared directories for authorized staff. It has also created a second cloud where documentation may be shared with authorized external parties. The computer support team has also worked with Dutch counterparts in the Fair, Green and Global Alliance to the same end, running workshops with staff to raise awareness, and developing recommendations for changes that should be made in the way data is shared and stored, and communications are conducted.

Website security

TNI's website is hosted on very secure servers with regular back-ups. In consultation with our security conscious web developers, we have worked hard to ensure tni.org is a closed loop site with few easy points of intrusion. Access to the website is limited to a handful of individual staff and administrative access is limited to just two individuals. Nevertheless, TNI's website came under protracted DDoS attack in 2019, one of many NGO sites targeted around the same time. Our site was down for nearly a month though we were able to run a mirror site within a few days while measures were put in place to put up a permanent shield to fend off the attack and prevent any future such attacks.

TNI puts a lot of effort into ensuring it acts internally in ways consistent with its values, and improving its accountability.

Fair Employer

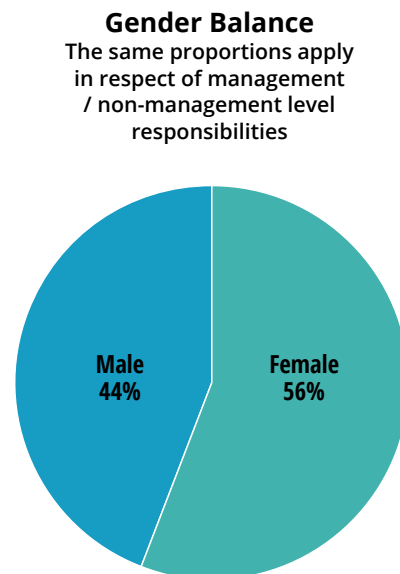

In line with TNI's vision and values, we are an equal opportunities employer with a strict policy of non-discrimination and strive for as much diversity as possible within the organization. Twenty-two nationalities are represented among our total complement of 55 staff, which includes payroll, external staff, interns and volunteers. Monthly staff meetings are held where news is exchanged, and consultations on policy are held. Separate staff meetings are held in Myanmar for the staff based there.

Consistent with our vision and values, TNI's internal organisational culture is non-hierarchical and highly consultative. As far as possible, decisions are taken through a process of consensus-building. While most staff are expected to be self-steering, there are also clear lines of accountability and recognition of the authority of the team leader to make final decisions. The organogram is set for each five-year cycle, being reviewed as necessary.

By the end of 2019, the foundation had 25,29 full time equivalent (FTE) employees (in 2018: 24,79) on the payroll. The average number of FTE over the year was 25,60 compared to 25,40 the previous year -- representing an increase of 0,2 FTE. At the end of the year, these figures represented 28 individuals. There were no resignations in 2019. One staff member was medically boarded part-time, with every effort made to support his recovery and gradual reintegration into the workplace on a full-time basis.

TNI uses as its guideline the Collective Bargaining Agreement (CAO) for the Care and Welfare Sector in The Netherlands. Staff receive an incremental increase for each year of service. In addition, and in line with the CAO, staff were awarded a one-off payment in January 2019, and a salary increase in July 2019. The ratio of the highest:median salary was 2,2 and the highest:lowest was 3,4. These figures do not take account of years of service or income tax differentials, which would bring the ratio down.

According to benchmarks established in 2018 by Partos, the umbrella body for non-governmental organisations operating within the development cooperation sector, TNI salaries are within the norm for the sector. In respect of benchmarks for the charitable sector more broadly, established by Goede Doel Nederland, TNI salaries are slightly below the norm.

There is a training budget set at 1% of the personnel budget, and guided by a training policy. 15 staff benefited from training courses in 2019 at a cost of Euro 9,853. These included data security and safe communications, foreign language skills (Spanish and French), graphic design, campaigning, writing, research grant writing, first response (medical emergencies), mindfulness, and gender/power sensitivity training. In addition, an in-house skills share was run on English writing, and weekly lunch-time accelerator sessions were introduced for self-education purposes.

Work began on the development of new Disciplinary and Grievance policies and procedures, which shall be finalized in early 2020.

The costs of the employees on the payroll were:

Salaries	1.163.197	1.176.836
Social security	185.503	200.900
Pension premiums	87.959	83.102
Sickness insurance	17.789	17.565
Other personnel costs	34.808	40.315
	1.489.424	1.518.718

Volunteers, Interns and Visiting Scholars

TNI had 2 volunteers in the course of 2019, and welcomed 8 interns hailing from China, USA, Germany, Spain, Bulgaria, UK and Netherlands. Most were students at Dutch universities. They are paid an honorarium in line with Dutch norms.

In addition, we continued to host visiting scholar, Siobhan Airey, based at TNI since 2018 while undertaking post-doctoral research on finance for development from a legal perspective and supported by a Caroline Fellowship from the Irish Research Council.

External Staff

TNI is registered as an employer only in The Netherlands and Belgium. Staff located in other countries are employed on freelance contracts. These staff are treated equally with payroll staff, with their salaries pegged to TNI salary policy and compensation for social security and pension contributions built into the calculations, adjusted for domestic tax rates and costs of living. In 2019, TNI employed 17 dedicated freelance staff in 2019 across the world, located in Brazil, India, Morocco, USA, UK, Spain (3) and Myanmar (8). Very sadly, one of our Myanmar team, Thura Myint Lwin, passed away in 2019 following a long illness.

Other Contracts

A further 19 people were contracted for specific work in the course of 2019, including in Myanmar, Indonesia, Bolivia, Chile, Argentina, Denmark, Belgium, Netherlands, Spain, UK, and Bulgaria.

A total of 74 people were contracted to work for TNI in various capacities and under various conditions in 2019.

Staffing of Fiscally Sponsored Projects

In addition, TNI serves as the fiscal sponsor for four projects, for which staff are also contracted. These are:

- Seattle-to-Brussels Network (Europe), with the coordinator on TNI's payroll
- Handel Anders Network (Netherlands), with the coordinator employed on a freelance contract
- Drug Policy Alternatives Group (Myanmar), with the coordinator and an assistant employed on freelance contracts
- Food Sovereignty in the MENA region (Tunisia), with four researchers on freelance contract

Social Report

TNI strives to establish and uphold ethical standards within its organization. Work began in 2019 on reviewing and updating TNI's Integrity Policies, which includes a longstanding policy on sexual harassment. New policies under development include a Whistle-Blower Policy and a Code of Conduct. These will be finalized in early 2020.

No inappropriate behaviour, misconduct or any other breaches of TNI's integrity policies were reported in 2019. No complaints were received on the basis of the Complaints Policy published on the TNI website.

Socially-conscious and Green Office

TNI owns its office building, originally built in the 19th century as a school. It is zoned for cultural and educational purposes by the City Council.

TNI strives to attract tenants which share TNI's vision and values. In 2019, it housed:

- a childcare centre
- a meditation centre
- four non-profit organisations (concerned with human rights law, consumer rights in respect of food, the right to food, a support organisation for animation filmmakers)
- a Dutch streetwear company associated with the hiphop scene of Amsterdam

One of the non-profit human rights law organizations vacated their office in early 2019. An existing tenant is interested to expand and discussions are underway about a reshuffle of office spaces without having to seek new tenants. TNI did, however, suffer a loss on expected rental income in 2019.

TNI is committed to upholding environmental standards and contributing to a just transition to more sustainable economies. We strive to do this in our conduct as an organisation as well as in seeking the structural change we believe necessary through our programmes.

Up to the end of 2019, solar panels installed on the roof of our building in mid-2016 have enabled us to save 22 tons of CO2 and have generated 31,362 kWh of solar energy, providing the anticipated third of our electricity needs annually. The balance is sourced from wind energy supplied by local farmers. In 2019, we replaced all lighting with LED, following analysis that lighting is the single biggest contributor to our electricity consumption. Having insulated the back side of the building some years ago, in 2019 we also insulated windows on the front of the building which effort we hope will show a reduction in gas consumption in 2020.

Fair and Green Procurement

TNI follows its Procurement Policy, which privileges small suppliers that share our values, with this being the primary criterion used in procuring supplies and (technical) services. This includes demonstrable commitments to ecological sustainability, fair trade practices and cooperative ownership structures.

Some examples of how TNI puts its values into practice in this regard, include:

- a worker-owned cooperative is contracted for cleaning services
- an informal network of artisans and small companies with strong affinity for TNI's values are contracted for building maintenance
- contracting auditing, salary and financial administration companies specifically dedicated to serving the non-profit sector
- using a non-profit travel agency dedicated specifically to supporting humanitarian organisations. We have also invested in improving our video conferencing facilities to help minimise the necessity for travel, and encouraging staff wherever possible to travel by train rather than fly or drive. None of our staff uses a car to travel to work.
- using only recycled or FSC-certified paper for printing, printing the minimum required, and always double-sided
- buying tea and coffee supplies from a fair trade company which TNI has supported over many decades, and buying other organic and fairly produced products as far as possible
- separating our waste (paper, glass, chemical, plastic, batteries, ink cartridges) for responsible recycling purposes

There were no procurements over Euro 30.000 in 2019 that would require tender processes.

Income

As a non-profit organization TNI is primarily (94%) dependent on grant income. The largest proportion of TNI funding continued to be that received from the Dutch Ministry of Trade and Development, representing nearly half of TNI's income. The dependence ratio is relatively low for those which receive funding from this source, and well below the ceiling of 75% set by the Ministry. TNI has made major efforts to ensure its funding base is as diverse as possible to spread the risk should one of the major grants not be renewed.

In 2019, we booked some success in increasing foundation support for TNI by 3% on the previous year, now accounting for 21% of TNI's funding base. We have also sought to increase 'own income' through community-building efforts since 2018. We saw a 108% increase in monies raised through these efforts in 2019, as compared to the previous year. TNI also increased the proportion of income coming from European Union grants by 2%, winning three new grants in 2019.

For tax purposes, TNI operates with fiscal number 0034.74.082. It pays taxes on salaries. TNI is not considered an enterprise and as such is exempt from VAT. TNI is acknowledged by the Dutch tax authorities as an organization that works for the general interest (ANBI: Algemeen Nut Beogende Instelling). This allows those who make donations to TNI to qualify for tax rebates within the European Union.

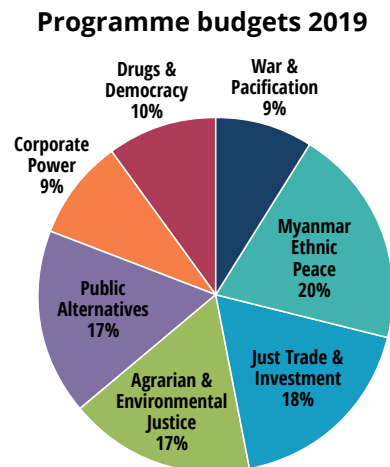

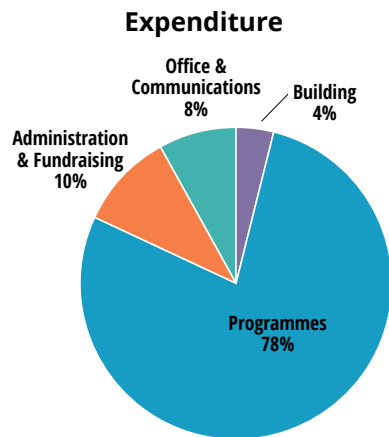

TNI has long been formally recognized as holding the equivalent of 501 (c) status in the USA, which status is reconfirmed annually with a certificate from NGOSource which may be used by those funders which are members of NGOSource.

In 2019, TNI sought the advice of a fiscalist on whether it would be considered liable for corporate tax on the basis of the surpluses it has generated annually. The conclusion of the fiscalist, subsequently confirmed by the Dutch tax authorities, is that TNI legitimately earns these modest surpluses, relative to total budget, which are not considered profit and are not liable to corporate tax. The sources of these surpluses include donations, contributions to jointly organized activities, book sales, renting of office space, and eventual settlement of longstanding debts owed TNI that had been written off.

Expenditure 2019

TNI spent 78% of its income in 2019 on programme implementation, 10% on administration and fundraising, and 12% on infrastructure (office and communications, building).

TNI raises grants for projects developed under our seven programme areas. Myanmar is our largest and only country-focused programme. It is able to draw on the expertise of many of the other programmes. Indeed, there is a lot of collaboration across TNI programmes as many of the issues covered are inter-connected. The programmatic divisions correlate with co-ordination structures and distinguish main umbrella fields.

Financial result 2019

The result in 2019 was a modest Euro 649 once funds raised through crowdfunding for a campaign were deducted for reservation in a restricted fund. TNI's continuity reserves, at the end of 2019, stood at Euro 1.174.321. A major goal set by the Supervisory Board has been to increase TNI's survival ratio (reserves/fixed costs x 365) to at least 180 days or 6 months. By the end of 2019, this was achieved – with the survival ratio standing at 225 days.

The ratio of current assets to short-term liabilities remains healthy at 153% (compared to 140% in 2018).

FINANCES

TNI is committed to the principles of independence, transparency, and accountability. TNI's financial reporting was rated 5 stars for 'excellence' by the Transparify initiative.

The 2020 budget was discussed with the Audit Committee of the Supervisory Board on 21 November 2019, and formally approved at the Supervisory Board meeting of 6 January 2020.

Budgeted income is based on secured contracts accounting for 92% of the budget. The balance is expected to come from pending funding applications and/or additional fundraising undertaken in the course of 2020. Any funds raised through individual donors are to be reserved for the continuity fund as securing the 2021 budget would depend on the outcome of a renewal of a grant from a major donor, currently accounting for around half TNI's total budget.

Overhead costs were budgeted at 17.33% of the total budget. These are divided into three categories:

1. Personnel – This accounts for 9.87% of total expenditure and concerns the costs of staff time not spent directly on project implementation (eg. Fundraising). It also includes a budget for training, interns and volunteers, and commuting costs of staff members who do not live in Amsterdam where TNI offices are located. TNI expects one staff member to go on maternity leave in 2020. No new employment was envisaged. The budget excluded the cost of salary increases due in July 2020 in line with the industrial wage agreement for the welfare and care sector, which TNI follows. The increase would only be implemented should the income budget be exceeded such that it is sufficient to cover this cost, and subject to approval of a revised budget by the Supervisory Board.

2. Building – This accounts for 0.54% of total expenditure. The figure reflects the balance of total costs of the building less rent and contributions to service costs received from tenants. Breakdown costs include depreciation; the mortgage; annual provision for major maintenance; cleaning and minor maintenance; utility costs; insurance, taxes and land lease. Minor maintenance costs were lower than previous years due to the revised maintenance plan. Rental income was budgeted higher than the previous year due to an increase to be effected in May 2020. A major maintenance plan up to 2035 is drawn up by the qualified constructor who advises and supervises building upkeep, and who revised the plan on 21 May 2019. Major maintenance planned for 2020 included replacement of aged boilers, painting of the external front woodwork and maintenance of masonry and joints.

3. Office and Communication – This accounts for 6.93% of total expenditure. Additional costs planned for in 2020 include investments in the upgrade of the website and in fundraising. Breakdown costs include office equipment, stationery, and other supplies; communication infrastructure such as the network, software, website, telephone and mailing; audit, financial and salary administration, bank charges; board meetings, fundraising and other organizational costs.

Project costs constitute 83% of the total budget, and are based on budgets agreed with funders. Personnel costs, on average, amount to 29% of total project costs. This is considered by TNI's funders to be an appropriate proportion, particularly given that TNI is primarily a research and advocacy institute. The balance is spent on the direct costs of project implementation.

Of the project contracts running in 2019, thirteen ended in 2019 (see Results). Most of the remaining projects end in 2020. The project goals or specific deliverables to be achieved are laid down in contracts with funders (See Funding agreements Active in 2019).

TNI's Planning, Monitoring and Evaluation system helps us monitor whether a project is on track to achieve its goals, including quarterly budget monitoring, ongoing assessments of contextual changes so that strategies can be adjusted where necessary, and annual outcome harvests.

2019 FELLOWS

Achin Vanaik

Retired Professor of International Relations and Global Politics, Jawaharlal Nehru University, New Delhi, India

Achin has dedicated much of his intellectual and activist life to combatting communalism in India. He has been warning of the fascist roots of the Hindutva project for decades, which are now manifest under the increasingly authoritarian Modi regime.

In 2019, Achin was active in condemning attempts to criminalise prominent cultural celebrities for denouncing the government's support for mob lynching, silencing of people's voices and misuse of courts to harass citizens. In an essay in a book celebrating the scholarship of historian Romila Thapar, Achin voiced concerns about knowledge production, democracy, Hindutva and rise of public anti-intellectuals. Achin also wrote the cover story for Caravan Magazine's May edition on the democratic weaknesses and Hindu biases of the Indian Constitution, as well as an article in The Wire on Modi's Hindu Rashtra project, which is attempting to redefine citizenship on exclusivist religious grounds, in much the same way Netanyahu is trying to do in Israel. In August, he called on progressive Indians to oppose governmental violence against Kashmiris in his essay, 'Hindutva on the March', for Jacobin magazine. Towards the end of the year, Achin finished his latest book, Nationalist Dangers, Secular Failings: A Compass for an Indian Left (forthcoming Aakar Books, 2020), which follows closely on his previous book The Rise of Hindu Authoritarianism: Secular Claims, Communal Realities (Verso, 2017). Achin spoke on the subject of nationalist authoritarianism, and related subjects, at OP Jindal Global University at Sonapat, Haryana as well as at Ambedkar University in Delhi in the course of the year, as well as at a forum organised by The Alliance for a Secular and Democratic South Asia, Coalition for a Democratic India, MIT-India, and at an Asia-Europe People's Forum (AEPF) meeting in Malaysia.

Following participation in an international strategic seminar organised by TNI in Soesterberg in June 2019, Achin went on to join the first AEPF working group meeting on China's Belt and Road Initiative (BRI), convened at TNI, helping to develop a framework to guide the bi-regional forum on dealing with BRI projects.

Achin continues to be active in the Coalition for Nuclear Disarmament and Peace (CNDP), where his work particularly focuses on getting young people to join nuclear advocacy. He is also active in the Indian Campaign for the Academic and Cultural Boycott of Israel (INCACBI), which works to pressure Israel to comply with international law. He is also a founder of the Society for Marxist Studies (SMS) in India, which continues to hold two-week residential summer and winter schools for post-graduate students and social activists from across India.

Ben Hayes

Independent researcher and consultant on security policies and civil liberties

Ben is a long time civil liberties activist working on human rights, democracy and security in the digital age. He has helped expose much of the cynical disregard for human rights in European security policy and practice, proving a valuable resource for many activist organisations in Europe and further afield as these policies get exported world-wide.

In 2019, he contributed to Leaving the War on Terror, published as the output of a TNI project which seeks to provide an alternative security framework that moves beyond the War on Terror frame and the so-called prevention strategies predicated on intrusive surveillance and undercover operations targeting Muslim communities. These ideas were tested by Ben and another participant in the TNI project at a panel on democracy and security organised by the online media platform Open Democracy at the Imagine Belfast Festival. The report was later launched at an event in the UK House of Commons, and Ben presented it at a colloquium of the University of Minnesota Law School at the invitation of the UN Special Rapporteur on Counter-terrorism and Human Rights.

Ben represented TNI in the opening panel of the Gibraltar Garrison Library's symposium on Borders and Bordering in the 21st Century. He spoke to Fortress Europe, a focus of another TNI project, in which Ben is providing insights on data ethics in respect of migrants and refugees, and the use of artificial intelligence in border controls. He also represented TNI at the annual conference of Computers, Privacy and Data Protection (CPDP), where he moderated a session on facial recognition, later hooking up with artists at Privacy Salon to talk about 'hacking' the system.

On the strength of earlier work with TNI on "shrinking space" for social movements, Ben was invited to collaborate with the Funders Initiative on Civic Space in developing an analysis of the main drivers of the tendency in the context of digital transformation, climate change and intersectional crises. He co-authored a report with the Director, drawing on much of TNI's analysis. A draft was presented to the 40 philanthropic foundations involved with the initiative. The report is due to be published by FICS in early 2020. Ben will continue to collaborate on the next phase, which concerns strategic directions for FICS members.

Meanwhile, Ben kicked off a new project with human rights and social justice organisations concerning the killing of Dag Hammarskjöld and state failure to cooperate with the UN inquiry. He continues to work for the UN High Commission for Refugees, and in identifying legal cases that might be interesting for the purposes of strategic jurisprudence. And he is busy preparing to turn his data protection consultancy into the UK's first data rights agency, working with lawyers involved in the litigation against Cambridge Analytica and the UK intelligence services post-Snowden.

Daniel Chavez

Researcher

Daniel is an activist-scholar who cut his teeth in the housing cooperative movement in Uruguay. He works closely with trade unions around questions of privatisation and democratisation of public companies, and is a keen analyst of Latin American politics.

Daniel is the only TNI staff member who also serves as a Fellow. In 2019, Daniel continued with his comparative international research on public energy utilities. This included a major study, undertaken with a team of economists from the Comuna research cooperative, on Uruguay's energy transition, from which he has distilled lessons for other countries. Following participation in an international workshop on public ownership of energy organized by CIDOB, a Barcelona-based progressive think tank, Daniel also wrote a chapter on the energy transition, public ownership and the new municipalism in Europe for a CIDOB published book which analyses new models of urban development around the world.

These, and other past studies by Daniel, are feeding into a project in South Africa that he is leading for TNI. The project is aimed at supporting South African progressives with the crisis of their national public utility, Eskom. Daniel participated in workshops held with trade unions and environmentalists in South Africa figuring out how to deal with the threat of privatisation of the ailing national energy company, while also steering the utility towards leading a just transition away from reliance on fossil fuels rather than allowing short term speculation by investors in a privatised renewables market they are bound to abandon when profits inevitably start falling.

Daniel also continued to work with a union in Cali in Colombia that has been battling privatisation of telecommunications. This finally succeeded in 2019, and the company is now pursuing a public-public partnership with a successful counterpart company in Uruguay thanks to Daniel being able to link them up.

Returning to his roots in Uruguay and Latin America, Daniel teamed up with the Latin American Council of Social Sciences (CLACSO) and the Foundation for Latin American Integration (FILA) to organise a conference in Uruguay's Chamber of Senators to discuss the economic and political challenges facing Latin America. The conference was very well attended by social movements and political activists, as well as political representatives, state and government officials. Daniel subsequently produced an excellent long read for TNI on the eve of the Uruguayan election, and represented TNI in a public debate in Amsterdam the left and the crisis in Venezuela. TNI also produced an interview with him on The Commons, the State and the Public from a Latin American perspective. Daniel spent much of the year working on a major conference on the theme of 'Democratic Socialism in Global Perspective', which is scheduled to take place in May 2020 at the Havens Wright Center for Social Justice in Madison, Wisconsin.

David Fig

Independent researcher and consultant

A TNI Fellow since 2012, David holds a PhD from the London School of Economics. He works as an environmental sociologist and political economist and has been a lifelong critic of the nuclear energy industry. Recent victories in which he participated were the South African court case which made illegal President Zuma's nuclear ambitions, and the briefing of the Vietnamese congressional committee on science, which led to Vietnam abandoning its reactor orders with Russia and Japan. He recently worked with a coalition of public health practitioners to bring about a sugar tax in South Africa.

David chairs the board of Biowatch South Africa, which he co-founded in 1997 and which is concerned with food sovereignty, agro-ecology and agrarian justice. Biowatch challenged the South African government and the Monsanto corporation in a legal process which took nine years, resulting in a landmark victory in the Constitutional Court.

He is active in a number of energy related struggles, including Earthlife Africa, the Pushing Back Coal and Pushing for Renewable Energy coalition, and the Energy Governance Initiative-South Africa. David is also a member of the Global Working Group Beyond Development working towards systemic emancipatory transformations.

He is an honorary research associate of the Society, Work and Politics Institute (SWOP) at Wits University, and of the Chair in Bio-Economy at the University of Cape Town. He has taught at UCT and Wits Universities, and engaged in training programmes in a number of Southern African countries. He has consulted widely for NGOs, think tanks and universities. His publications include books, monographs, book chapters and journal articles, some of which have appeared in French, Portuguese, Spanish and German.

2019 FELLOWS

Edgardo Lander

Professor Emeritus, Central University of Venezuela, Professor at the Universidad Indígena de Venezuela and at the Universidad Andina Simón Bolívar in Quito

Edgardo is a dedicated activist intellectual and eco-socialist working to promote de-growth, decoloniality and systemic change across the South, and particularly in Venezuela. He has long been a strong critic of the oil-dependent development path that has opened territories to destructive transnational mining companies.

Edgardo has been active in the struggle against the Orinoco Mining Arch, covering large bio-diverse territories of several indigenous peoples, where all the country's main rivers are located. A government project, the territories have been opened up to transnational corporations for large scale open-pit mining in violation of the constitution and the main environmental, labour and indigenous peoples' rights laws. In 2019, he was involved with a documentary – partly funded by TNI – on the massive Arco Minero of Orinoco mining project as part of a coalition of activists, indigenous communities, academics and others opposing the project.

In January 2019, an attempted coup saw many Western governments subsequently recognising the self-proclaimed President in exile and fears that a US military intervention was imminent. Since 2017, Edgardo has been a core member of the Citizen's Platform in Defense of the Constitution, comprised of disillusioned Chavistas critical of Venezuela's increasingly unpopular government. The Platform has advocated for peaceful, democratic, constitutional, electoral and negotiated alternatives to the threats of US military intervention or a civil war. It proposes a constitutionally-based consultative referendum to ask the population if they want to renew all the main state institutions: Executive, Parliament,

Supreme Court and the National Electoral Council. In 2019, it was the Platform, with Edgardo as its main international ambassador, that was able to provide some sober guidance on a progressive response that denounces any attempts at intervention by external military forces while also being clear about the urgent need to reclaim popular sovereignty within the country if civil war was to be avoided. Edgardo spoke to the Venezuelan situation on public platforms across the Americas and Europe, including organised by TNI. He was also in high demand from the media across the world, giving countless interviews over the course of the tumultuous year.

Edgardo has been an active member of TNI's New Politics project, which has been concerned with learning lessons of the demise of the left in government. He produced two key publications in 2019 – a new book Crisis civilizatoria. Experiencias de los gobiernos progresistas y debates en la izquierda latinoamericana (forthcoming, Calas 2020) and a chapter, 'The End of Neoliberal Democracy: Inequality in post-democratic capitalist societies', published in Margaret Abraham (ed), Sociology and Social Justice (Sage, 2019). He also argued forcefully for concrete utopias, rather than abstractions.

Meanwhile, Edgardo continued to argue for a decoloniality in respect of power in Latin America, and to participate in the Global Working Group on Beyond Development, which is working towards systemic emancipatory transformations and also involves another TNI Fellow, David Fig.

2019 FELLOWS

Hilary Wainwright

Independent researcher and editor of Red Pepper magazine

A life-long socialist feminist, Hilary has worked for nearly four decades on the theory and practice of participatory democracy and community wealth-building. She has documented countless examples of resurgent democratic movements from Brazil to Britain and the lessons they provide for progressive politics.

In 2019, she continued to serve as on the UK Labour Party's 'Community Wealth Building Commission', an exploration of how municipalities could use public procurement powers to protect and improve local jobs, assure community well-being and strengthen democratic planning. The Commission included unions, cooperatives, community-based organisations and local governments and used the town of Preston as positive inspiration for what is possible. Hilary contributed to a longread published in The Guardian on this kind of new economic thinking emerging among progressive young economists working transatlantically. She provided input for a proposed handbook on worker and community control over public companies, drawing on research she did on public companies in Uruguay and other TNI research on similar cases. Hilary wrote an article, invoking the inspiration of the Lucas Aerospace workers of the 1970s, in support of Belfast's Harland and Wolff shipyard workers. Facing retrenchment as their industry goes bankrupt, they have been demanding a state-supported buy-out that would enable workers to put their skills to social and environmental use by converting their industry into a producer of renewable energy. Such knowledge from below being valued in public planning is very much the central subject of Hilary's latest, well-received book. She continued to give talks explaining A New Politics from the Left, including at the Institute of Development Studies at Sussex University, at the Socialist Theory and Movement seminar series at Glasgow University, and at The World Transformed conference.

In the context of the ongoing Brexit debates in the UK, Hilary also did research on the successful anti-austerity programme of Portugal to demonstrate that this was possible even as a member of the European Union, which TNI co-published as a longread. She took the anti-Brexit position in a debate within the left run by The New Internationalist magazine. She also co-authored a pamphlet on democratic crisis of Britain and the EU prepared for the UK Labour Party, and an article on lessons Syriza in Greece.

While the year ended with the defeat of the Corbynism in the UK elections, Hilary played an energetic role in building a politics from below and feeding the new democratic economic thinking that has informed a new generation of activists.

2019 FELLOWS

Jun Borrás

Professor of Agrarian Studies at the International Institute for Social Studies (ISS), Erasmus University Rotterdam

Jun has been dedicated to emancipatory rural politics since his youthful formation in the struggles for agrarian justice in the Philippines in the 1980s and his pioneering role in the 1993 founding of La Vía Campesina, the international small farmers' movement with which TNI cooperates closely.

Jun has collaborated with the TNI Myanmar team and other Myanmar CSOs in designing and conducting a hugely successful, and still ongoing, activist course in political economy. He has collaborated with the TNI Myanmar-based team in a research project concerning crop booms and migrant farm workers in Southeast Asia (Myanmar, Vietnam) and inside China (Yunnan and Guangxi). It is part of a project looking at the links between these societies in terms of natural resource flows, labour regimes, investments, infrastructures, technology. The project is being undertaken with the College of Humanities and Development Studies at China Agricultural University, Beijing; the University of Hanoi; as well as TNI. Jun and TNI's Agrarian and Environmental Programme often collaborate in joint initiatives, including the ongoing research being undertaken under the rubric of Emancipatory Rural Politics Initiatives (ERPI) – looking at authoritarianism and emancipatory counters in rural contexts; and the BRICS Initiative in Critical Agrarian Studies (BICAS) which looks at the agrarian politics of BRICS countries. As part of the ERPI work, he wrote 'Agrarian social movements: The absurdly difficult but not impossible agenda of defeating right-wing populism and exploring a socialist future'.

The first edition of the Journal of Peasant Studies (JPS) writeshop was held in Beijing in 2019. Jun is the editor of JPS, which initiated the annual event with the College of Humanities and Development Studies of China Agricultural University in Beijing (where Jun is also an adjunct professor), PLAAS, Young African Researchers in Agriculture (YARA), and the Future Agricultures Consortium. The writeshops are aimed at supporting the next generation of activist-scholars from the Global South.

Meanwhile, Jun won one a prestigious advanced grant for top researchers from the European Research Council. Jun will be using the grant to build on his long-standing work on land politics, and to widen it to examine how it reshapes the geopolitics in Africa, Asia and Latin America and four spheres of global social life: food, climate change politics, labour, nation-state/citizenship. He was also cited for the second consecutive year as one of the top 1% cited researchers in his field.

Jun is also part of an ongoing research project in Mali (with Via Campesina's CNOP) and Nigeria (with Friends of the Earth's ERA) on conflict and political contestations at the intersection between resource grabbing and climate change politics. Anchored by FIAN International, the research will be concluded by the end of 2020. He co-wrote an article problematising land grabbing in the context of climate change politics, dubbed 'green grabbing', drawing on a previous project looking at the same phenomenon in Asia which was undertaken with TNI, among other partners.

Inspired by the experience of his own pilgrimage a few years ago, Jun also initiated an action research project in collaboration with Paul Nicholson (one of the founding leaders of La Via Campesina) and with community activists on the political economy of the increasing popularity of the Camino de Santiago and its implications for the local communities across the pilgrimage trail.

Phyllis Bennis

Director of the New Internationalism Project at the Institute for Policy Studies

A life-long peace activist, Phyllis has worked tirelessly for decades to oppose US military interventions across the world and to champion Palestinian rights.

She serves on the Board of Jewish Voices for Peace, and is active in the Boycott, Divest, Sanctions (BDS) campaign aimed at pressuring Israel into respecting international law. Throughout 2019, Phyllis wrote numerous articles on relations between the US and Israel, particularly in light of Israel's settlement expansion in the West Bank, siege of Gaza, and US recognition of Israel's annexation of Syria's Golan Heights. As Phyllis has regularly observed, the stronger the BDS campaign becomes, the more virulent become the efforts of the Israeli government and its supporters to paint all criticism of Israel as 'anti-semitic'. Phyllis also wrote numerous articles about the dangers of false accusations of anti-semitism against progressives in the US. She pointed out that the real anti-semitic threat is clearly linked to the white supremacy unleashed in recent years, which also suggested a strong basis for unity with people of colour who are bearing the brunt of this. She gave talks to students at Hostra and Brandeis universities on Palestinian rights and U.S. policy in the Middle East.

Phyllis also continued her work with the Poor People's Campaign (PPC), which aims to tackle racism, poverty, militarism and climate change. Phyllis has been part of an IPS team helping PCC develop a Moral Budget, which includes calls for massive cuts in the U.S. military budget with the funds redirected to addressing social needs and climate change. Phyllis and one of PPC's main leaders, the Reverend Dr William Barber II, also co-authored an article to this effect. Phyllis followed up with a talk at the PPC's Freedom School for student activists. On the issue of linking war and militarism with climate, and particularly the need to cut the military budget to fund a Green New Deal and other efforts to protect the planet, she wrote further pieces for Jacobin and The Nation, and spoke at both the teach-in and rally of the Fire Drill Fridays climate protests in Washington DC, initiated by actor-activist Jane Fonda with Greenpeace, and spoke at a New Energy Economy event in Santa Fe, New Mexico. Phyllis joined Rev. Barber, IPS Executive Director John Cavanagh, Noam Chomsky and 100 other artists, intellectuals and activists in signing a petition to "strongly condemn President Trump's efforts to vilify, intimidate, and use force against refugees and asylum seekers at and approaching the U.S. border."

She continued to comment on the toll of US wars across the world, the threat of a new war with Iran and US hypocrisy on nuclear disarmament, prospects for the end of war in Afghanistan and Nato's legacy after 70 years.

REMEMBERING THURA MYINT LWIN (1976-2019)

The year 2019 began on a sad note with news that Thura, our colleague in Myanmar, had passed away. Thura was a pioneer and very active member of self-help groups that campaigned for greater access to ART treatment in the country. He worked tirelessly to end the discrimination and stigmatisation of people living with HIV, drug users and other marginalised groups such as sex workers and men having sex with men. He was involved in establishing the Greater Involvement of People Living with HIV/ Aids (GIPA) group in 2005, and was also one of the founders of the self-help group “Oasis” and the Myanmar Positive Group, the largest network of people living with HIV in the country. We are privileged to have worked with him since 2009, and he will always remain in our hearts.
