Methodological note on Statistical Adjustment: the case of Germany

One might notice that The 2010 figures look a bit odd for many of the countries and there is a major change in the data pattern - UAA suddenly increasing in 2010 and then decreasing again, for instance. This might be rooted in issues linked with statistical adjustments. The case of Germany detailed below aim at providing an illustration of the significance of these adjustments.

There have been two statistical adjustments on the measuring of agricultural holdings in Germany. This can mainly be summarized as following:

- Until 1998 they collected data starting from 1 ha
- 1999-2009 they collected data starting from 2 ha
- From 2010 onward they collect data from 5 ha onwards

See official (german) explanation:

„Bis 1998 erstreckte sich der Erfassungsbereich der totalen Agrarberichterstattung auf alle Betriebe und Besitzeinheiten mit einer landwirtschaftlich oder forstwirtschaftlich genutzten Fläche von jeweils 1 ha und mehr sowie auf alle Betriebe und Besitzeinheiten mit einer landwirtschaftlich genutzten Fläche unter 1 ha (einschließlich der Betriebe ohne landwirtschaftlich genutzte Fläche), deren natürliche Erzeugungseinheiten mindestens einer jährlichen landwirtschaftlichen Markterzeugung von 1 ha landwirtschaftlich genutzter Fläche entsprechen. Ab 1999 ist die untere Erfassungsgrenze auf 2 ha LF angehoben worden. Landwirtschaftliche Betriebe mit weniger als 2 ha LF wurden seitdem nur noch erfasst, wenn festgelegte Mindestgrößen ausgewählter Tierkategorien oder Spezialkulturen erreicht werden. Für Forstbetriebe gelten 10 ha Waldfläche als untere Grenze. Ab 2010 wurden die unteren Erfassungsgrenzen landwirtschaftlicher Betriebe weiter erhöht. So gilt statt der 2 ha-Grenze nun ein Flächenumfang von 5 ha LF als Mindestgröße.“

(<http://www.bmel-statistik.de/landwirtschaft/landwirtschaftliche-betriebe/>)

In light of what, we can assume that

- Table 1 – extend of farmland concentration: this might be even worse given the fact that most farms below 5 ha are excluded
- Table 2 – decline of small-scale farmers: the 79% reduction might include the statistical reduction which means that the decline has not been that strong. What is clear that we cannot say anything about the development of the holdings below 5 ha.

It is indeed confusing that the EU data lists farms in Germany below 5 ha and below 2 ha. Some explanation efforts:

(1) If you look at the table of the BMEL they also have farms below 5 ha. But the FN 2 explains that that farms below 5 ha are included in so far as they have substantive other production ("...wenn festgelegte Mindestgrößen ausgewählter Tierkategorien oder Spezialkulturen erreicht werden"). For instance, if a 50 cattle indoor dairy farm has only 3 ha land, this farm would be included on the basis of the large number of cattle.

(2) But this means that we have not all farms below 5 ha that are included. We have an undefined percentage of farms included (with substantive agricultural production) and an undefined number excluded.

(3) The data of the table above shows roughly the same overall numbers of Farms below 5 ha as the EU data (12,010+9,720=21,730). It seems that Eurostat does not takes additional numbers.

(4) This view is also supported by the much sharper fall of overall farms between 2007 and 2010 (from 370,000 to 299,000) and farms below 5 ha. We have a drop from 58,730 to 11,690 farms between 2007 and 2010! So it could make us argue that it seems realistic that some 40,000 small farms between 2 and 4,9 ha have been dropped out of the data set due to the new formula (but still existed in 2010!)

(5) When you look at the data from 1997 to 2000 of the farms below 2 ha, you see a similar sharp and abnormal fall (82,870 to 35,760)

The first footnote in the table above argues that the 2007 data has been adapted to the new 2010 methodology. The means that comparing these 2007 data with Eurostat data tells us the impact of the methodological change:

Germany (u	653.550	606.070	566.910	534.410	471.960	412.300	389.880	370.480	299.130	285.030
------------	---------	---------	---------	---------	---------	---------	---------	---------	---------	---------

- (a) The overall number of farms drops by 49,000 from 370,480 to 321,600...
- (b) ...with all (= 49,000) drop from 82,290 to 33,000 in farms below 5 ha.

Similar impact is reasonable for the methodological change in 1999.
